My Day in NYUAD

Welcome to my website, where I invite you to explore my daily life here on campus. With a vibrant purple backdrop, reminiscent of NYU's iconic color, I share insights into who I am and the activities that fill my days. Step into my world as I guide you through my routines and experiences, offering glimpses into the unique blend of academics, hobbies, and personal moments that define my journey at NYU. Through this immersive experience, my goal is to connect with you, sharing a piece of my life and inviting you to discover the person behind the website. Join me on this colorful adventure as we explore the essence of my daily existence at NYU.

Initially, I attempted to structure my day by having various periods and outlining the corresponding activities. However, I found this approach to be monotonous, lacking variation in each segment. To address this, I opted to divide the content into five distinct sections: the homepage, video, my room, classes, and hobbies. This division allowed me to inject diversity into each part, making the website more engaging and dynamic. One of the most challenging aspects of the website was incorporating animations. I wanted scrolling to seamlessly transition users to the next section, necessitating research into CSS and JavaScript for achieving smooth transitions. This process required experimentation and learning to ensure a polished and fluid user experience. Through dedication and exploration, I was able to enhance the interactivity and visual appeal of the website, enriching the overall browsing experience for visitors.

I am proud to announce that I have met my goals on this website. My goal was to build the website from scratch without the use of templates and while this was a tough process, sources from W3 and Youtube helped me in building this website.
